The Shilling Series.

SPECIAL ADVERTISEMENT. It having been the injention of the proprietor of the "SHIL-LING ARTICLES," from the outset, to introduce into general ase quite a number of reliable, cheap, and popular family requisites, be takes pleasure in amouncing as now ready the THIND and FOURTH items, which will be found, he thinks, of equally as pepular a character as either of the preceding. THE SHIL-LING INDELIBLE INK, and THE SHILLING TROCHES, RECAPITULATION OF THE SHILLING SERIES.

THE SHILLING HAIR TONIC-A first-plate compound, judicionaly prepared, with great shill, highly perfumed, and well calculated to please the most fastidious. The bottles actually hold as much as any of the 25 cent kind. Emphatically, this is a cheap and attractive thing. It sells rapidly, and supercedes all the old fashfound, high-priced kinds, wherever introduced. A single trial, which, at its low price, is comparatively inexpensive, will convince any one of the truth of our assertions. THE SHILLING HAIR TONIC was the first of the celebrated SHILLING SERIES, and is proved a "his" at once; being a good thing, and so very chesp, no other result was to be ex-pected. Nearly TEN THOUSAND DOZEN have been sold in the short space of three months. We hear dealers say every day that they never had any article that sold so fast. At a popular price, within the reach of persons of the most moderate means, it fills a void long open, and well fills it too. The public are ever quick to adopt any new article which has undoubted merit, though properly suspicious of high-flown and high-priced articles, of which extravagant things are promised. We have never claimed wonders for THE SHILLING HAIR TONIC; we have simply stated it as "fully equal to any other kind," even when sold at double or quadruple its price. This position we still maintain, and wish to press it upon public notice with un-diminished force. In the composition of THE SHILLING HAIR TONIC, none but the best materials are used; all inferior ones are scrupalously avoided, and especially have we rejected a number of articles which to our knowledge are used in other hair compounds, and which we know to be deleterious. It has been our aim to produce an article worthy to find a place in every fam-ily, and at a price which should add to its popularity. We think these objects are both fulfilled, and, under a system of energetic pushing we look for its general introduction at no distant day.

Meanwhile, we are well satisfied with our progress; public attention has been attracted, large sales for cash have been made, and a glorious future opened up, which we think will be amply re-

Price 12 cents only.

THE SHILLING BENZINE was the second item introduced in the "SHILLING SERIES," and we can confidently say that no article has been placed before the public for several years which is of so useful a nature; a brief mention of its uses will at once indicate its claims to universal adoption:

indicate its claims to universal adoption:

BENZINE is a new liquid, lately discovered, and the best and only one yet introduced that will satisfactorily answer the following uses: For removing (without the slightest injury to color or texture), from all kinds of silk and woolen goods even of the finest character, stains produced by greasy substances, such as oil, butier, tailow, tar, wax candle, fresh paints, &c., &c. Its sharp smell disappeare rapidly soon after being applied—no trace is left upon the fabric by Benzine, unlike turpenthe, camphene, and many other old-fastioned articles used for removing spots. For cleaning gloves, it is capitally adapted, indeed, this is one of its most useful purposes; their color is not changed by its application. Fainters and artists find it exceedingly useful for washing their brushes. Stains may also be effectually removed from papers, manuscripts, drawings, plans and all kinds of brushes. Stains may also be effectually removed from papers.
maps, engravings, manuscripts, drawings, plans and all kinds of papers; a thousand uses will occur to every housekeeper wherein it will be found indispensible, oftentimes saving dollars at the cost of a few cents. For renevating silks, risbons carpets, table and piano covers, cost collars, vests, pants, &c., nothing has ever been found so really effective. Full directions with each bottle.
Sald at only 12 cents.

Sald at only 12 cents.

For FAMILIES, the Berzine is put up in larger sized bottles, For FARMLES, the Beautie of the properties and one dollar—these hold much more in proportion, and are especially adapted where the article is likely to be in constant requisition. Inquire for DENSLOW'S, and take no other. Many druggists are selling something which they call Benzine, but which in many cases leaves as much greate on the place where it is applied as it was expected to take off. The deli-eacy of this liquid is such that care should be observed to obtain the best and most reliable kind, which is "DENSLOW'S."

THESE VALUABLE ARTICLES Are now kept for sale by nearly FOUR THOUSAND DEALERS,

Draggiets, grocers, fancy stores and general dealers. All find them to go off with great rapidity. Sold only for cash. None sent on commission. Wholesale discount liberal. Orders from the trade solicited. Magnificent show bills accompanying the article.

"The writer of the following papers trusts that a reason may be found for their publication in the circumstances which gave rise to them. In their original form they ware merely private thoughts noted down for personal use while reading the Ed and part of the Ed chapters of St. Luke's Ospel. As such, they were, of course, wholly unfitted for any other purpose. But after publishing a little book called "Thoughts for the Holly week," the writer was urged to complete the work by Adding "Thoughts for the Remainder of Lent," and though it was not easy to comply with the request, which was, therefore, for the time set aside, it suggested the enlargement of the notes before mentioned, and they were in consequence brought into their present form.
